Kui nameplates setup guide pdf document

Kui nameplates guide. Kui nameplates profile. Kui nameplates setup. Kui nameplates settings.

Setting this is easy. It is so helpful, particularly in PvE, where bosses have phases based on health percent. 2) GAME REPAIR - You may also want to perform a "Repair" of your game install before restarting, just in case there are any corrupted game files causing the problem. You can do this by typing /knp or /kuinameplates in chat. KuiNameplates is also super lightweight. This will open a window with several sub-menus on the left side, including: GeneralFade rulesHealth barsCast barsTextName-onlyFrame sizesAurasThreatClass PowerBoss ModsCVars As I mentioned above, I'm not going to dive into many details on these menus (you can watch the YouTube video for that). This means that your game will run smoother, and you will get better frame rates while playing! Owner: Kesavaa Curseforge: Link You can get back to the settings by typing the /knp again or by navigating there with the "AddOns" tab at the top of the window you were just in. They must have casued someting strange with the enemy nameplates FOR MY HUNTER "Shintora" ONLY, hes on Silvermoon EU. If anyone maanged to find a solution to this, I'd greatly appreciate any help Shintora 09-05-18, 08:27 AM #2 A Frostmaul Preserver Join Date: Jun 2016 Posts: 256 Barbed Shot and Concussion Shot don't show up on nameplates by default. If you want to dive deeper into all the settings, check out the YouTube video I made. I also like to hit the "+ Dungeon Targets" button in the top right to apply custom coloring to dangerous mobs in Shadowlands dungeons. If you are using the default settings, there are several things you will want to change here. What does KuiNameplates do? This can quickly clutter your screen and make it hard to tell when certain enemies you are fighting. Plate Settings (Interface -> Game -> Names) The first settings you need to change are actually in the default Blizzard menus. Let's take a look at some customization you should make. You can see the settings in the screenshot below, but here is a list of the changes I make if you can't see the image: Disable "Personal Resource Display" to remove the health bar under your characterChange "Nameplate Motion Type" to "Stacking Nameplates"Change "NPC Names" to "Hostile, Quest, and Interactive NPCs"Check "Always Show Nameplates"Turn "Minions" on under "Enemy Units"Check the "Friendly Players" box in the second column (both should be checked) These are the settings I like the most but feel free to play around with them to get them to your liking. Many of its best features are enabled by default and significantly improve the default Blizzard plates. Please help me im desperate. How to install KuiNameplates You can install KuiNameplates by placing the CurseForge download folder into your addon folder (located in the same drive as your game). You can do that by following these instructions located on our support site: I know you already said you deleted the WTF and Cache folders, but please try following this guide fully. If you need a more detailed guide on how to install addons, check out my article here. Line-of-site Transparency (CVars -> Line-of-site Alpha) The last change I make is to apply a fade to nameplates that are out of my LOS. Posting Rules You may not post new threads You may not post replies You may not post attachments You may not edit your posts HTML code is Off One of my favorite addons in my UI is KuiNameplates. Here is what the default nameplates look like without any changes While this is nice and clean, it lacks some information and style that I prefer on my nameplates. While there are other nameplate addon options, Kui is one of my favorite because it works well out of the box and isn't as intimidating as addons like Plater. To do this, press ESC and then click on Interface. Turning them on in KuiNameplates is easy. Bar Texture & Animation (Health bars -> Bar Texture/Animation) The next change I make is to select a new texture and animation for my health bars from the dropdowns on the health bars menu. Add Target Arrows (General -> Target arrows) Okay, time for the Kui-specific settings. Now, go to the General sub-menu and enable the Target Arrows box. Instead, we are going to go through the customizations quickly so you can get started with Kui. shot, nor the proccing debuffs from my azerite gear. All debuffs are correctly displayed on the enemy nameplates on my Warlock. The full bright nameplate will show up even if an enemy is behind a wall if you don't do this. My plan is to go over basic settings to change in Kui. The guide on how to do that can be found here. Done it all, doesnt help, theres no such folder located in "VirtualStore" only a NVidia folder. I typically set these to around 150 and 22, respectively. You can change that by selecting a different option under the "Max. I like to turn this setting on because it makes it easier to pick my target out of a group when things get hectic. Recommended Customizations You will need to open the Kui settings to get started with making customizations. I personally like the "OmniCD Flat" texture with a "Smooth Animation." Change Target Color (KuiNameplates Target Helper Plugin) For this change, you will need to download another addon called KuiNameplates Target Helper. Now after chatting for like 30 mins with a CM on the support chat he was left helpless, he couldnt fix this problem, no console comandd he provided did the trick. Once installed, you can access its menu under the AddOns tab, where we found the basic Kui settings. Click on the CVars menu and then check the "Allow Kui Nameplates to modify CVars" box. By default, the health information will only show for damaged enemies. I deleted the WTF and Cache folders already, it didnt help. You can use an addon manager like WowUp. With an addon manager, you can simply search for "KuiNameplates" and then click install. I still cant see my debuffs on the enemy nameplate above its head. In an analysis I did comparing every major nameplate addon, I found that Kui consistently used the least amount of memory and processing power. Next, go to the Game tab and then select the Names menu on the left. Using Stacking Nameplates makes a huge difference when you are fighting multiple enemies. How to use KuiNameplates If you aren't too picky about the style of your nameplates, you can install KuiNameplates and benefit immediately. Enable guild names on friendly plates (Name-only -> Show player guilds) This easy change will add the guild name below the class-colored player name for allies. Increase debuff size (Auras -> Icon Size) Now that I have increased the size of my target plates, my debuffs look a little small. health hostile" if you want. Honestly, the most important option to change here is the Nameplate Motion Type. You can do this easily by going to the "Frame sizes" menu and moving the width and height sliders to the right of the "Target size" checkbox. However most of them can be resolved with one of the following steps: 1) ADD-ON REMOVAL - It will be necessary to remove any Addons that you have installed and check to see if you have the problem without them. If you are following along, here is what I have so far... Add Health text (Text -> "Show health text") This is a must-have customization. Change Target Size (Frame Sizes -> Target Size Width/Height Sliders) I also like to change the size of the target frame. This plugin for Kui gives you the ability to set the color for your target and custom colors for mobs by name. It does display Intimidation and Murder of Crows tho. Some of its best features include: Custom sizes, fonts, and colorsShowing HP % on nameplatesExclamation marks next to quest mobsNameplate styling with glows and target arrowsUnique plate coloring for tanksClass resources (combo points, shards, runes, etc...) on platesAdditional "plugin" addons that add even more features! I'll show you how to enable these different features in detail, but first, let's talk about how to install the Kui. This guide will show you what Kui can do and walk you through some recommended settings. Final Thoughts and Important Links KuiNameplates is an excellent addon for replacing and customizing the Blizzard nameplates. 09-05-18, 07:13 AM #1 A Kobold Labourer Join Date: Sep 2018 Posts: 1 Debuffs missing on nameplates after using AddOns Description: Hello, ive had 4 addons installed for the first time tonight; Threat Plates, OmniCC, Kui Nameplates, and Shadowed Unit Frames. ANSWER FROM GM RAVENBAT: "Ravenbat: Hello there Florian, There can be several causes for these sorts of problems, and looking at the names of the addons you were using it does look like at least one of these would have caused the problems. Simply go to the Text sub-menu and check the "Show health text" box. To fix this, I will go to the Auras menu and turn the "Icon size (normal)" to 30 and "Icon size (purge)" to 38. KuiNameplates replaces the default nameplates with ones that give you more customizations and look much better than the default plates. Easy change and it looks pretty cool as well. After deactivating these Add Ons the game doesnt display my debuffs like the bleed from "Barbed Shot" nor the slow effect from "Concussive Shot" on the enemy nameplate (the one above the enemys head) anymore. I am still amazed that the default Blizzard bars don't provide health information on nameplates. I will typically enable the target color and set it to an orangey color (but feel free to do whatever you would like). Next, set the line-of-site alpha slider to around 0.2 (or whatever looks good to you). This easy-to-use addon gives more control over your nameplates. Now ive deleted the entire WoW Folder, ran CCCleaner, didnt help, im currently reinstalling the entire game and i still cant see the debuffs from barbed shot or conc. It adds nice features like exclamation icons by quest mobs. To set this, go to the name-only menu and check the "Show player guilds" box.
